2. that's so exciting...what kind of snowy friday poem do we get to look forward to...

The Winter Palace, Philip Larkin?

4. Poets love to write about snow. There are a million to choose from. But I've been waiting all week to post one of my all-time favorites. Tomorrow.

5. Alec...send some of that snow magic down here to OH...
I need a white Christmas!
All we have today is drizzle.

7. As far as snow photogaphy is concerned, there is also this terrific picture by Leonard Freed :

And of course Giacomelli's pictures of priests playing in the snow...

I also like Uimonen's pictures of NY under snow.

9. LUCKY! I wish we has snow here in the north east where I am visiting family. Blow some of that over its not fair that you get all the snow and we get all the global warming! It sure makes your studio look great though.

10. Well, still no snow here in the UK but we did get a thick sparkly frost, and for the first time this year the weather begins to look a bit festive. Perhaps the knock-on effects of snow week?

12. It's still winter-mild and currently raining in Toronto today. Maybe I flubbed a step during my snow dance.

13. I still remember the great snow falls out on Lake Calhoun. We could use a little of it here in Chicago. Crazy mixed up weather.
